Old Tokaido highway

Installed in 1928, the Shimizu Port Teller is the last surviving example of early coastal shipping navigation aids. It is a designated national tangible cultural property.

During the Edo period, this was a loading yard for Koshu (Yamanashi) rice being transported to Edo (Tokyo). Part of it remains administered by Yamanashi Prefecture.

This grand edifice was constructed by Jirocho as a fitting resting place for the sailors of the Kamrinmaru who lost their lives during an assault by government forces. The Soshi no Haka gravestone was a gift from Teshu Yamaoka, a former loyal vassal to the shogun.
